£14,000,000 to meet a paper circulation of £40,000,000 or £50,000,000. If it comes to a war, Russia must either come for a foreign loan or rob the bank; and if the Emperor takes that of Foreign Affairs of the French Republic, pre-money, he takes what no more belongs to him, sents the position of Hungary in a very strong and what he has no more right to take, than if the Chancellor of the Exchequer came down to Threadneedle street and took the reserve out of the vaults there. There are men here present who know I am speaking the truth. I know it because I have been on the spot, and made it my business to understand these things. I should swore to maintain the constitution and independnever have spoken thus of the poverty of Russia, f she had not violated a principle which every man who admires Hungarian fortitude and courage, and feels an interest in the cause of libery and patriotism, is bound to further and up

Well, these are my moral means, by which invite the peace party to put down this system of loaning. Now, will any one in the city of ince, that it London dare to be a party to loan to Russia, either directly or openly, or by agency and copartnership with any house in Amsterdam or Paris? Will any one dare, I say, to come before the citizens of this free country and avow that he has lent his money for the purpose of cutting the throats of the innocent people of Hungary? I have heard such a project talked of. But let it only assume a shape, and I promise you, that we, the peace party, will have such a meeting as has not yet been held in London for the purpose of denouncing the blood-stained project -- for the purpose of pointing the finger of scorn at the house or the individuals who employ their money in such a mannerfor the purpose of fixing an indellible stigms of infamy upon the men who would lend their money for such a vile, unchristian and barbaous purpose. This is my moral force. As for Austria, no one, I suppose, would ever think of lending her money. Why, she has been banktending her money. Why, she has been bank-rupt twice within the last forty years, and now her paper money is at a discount of 15 per cent. As the peace party throughout the country, we will raise a crusade against the credit of every Government that is carrying on an unholy war. Don't let any one talk of Russian urces. It is the poorest thing and most beggarly country in Europe. It has not a farthing Russia a strong political power! Why, there is not so giganic a political imposture in all Europe. They talk sometimes as if England and Englishmen were afraid of Russia. Now, I wish to disabuse all minds respecting my views on this subject. I do not come here to oppose the Russian advance into Hungary because I think that in any conceivable turn of events Russia ever can be dangerous to the existence or interests of England. If Russia should take a step that required England or any other great maritime power, like the United States, to attack that Power, why we should fall like a than a deficiency in thunderbolt upon her. You would in six months crumple that empire up, or crive it in-to its own dreary fastnesses, as I now crumple has. She has an army on paper without a commissariat, a navy without sailors, and a military chest without a farthing in it. Why, gentlethat they will come, that the hordes of Russians were coming down like an avalanche of men upon the Hungarians, to exterminate them? It is four months ago; and where are they now? What progress have tucky. I would not they made? I say nothing of the ultimate consequences of the Russian invasion. I do not shut my eyes to the peril that awaits the Hungarians. But if Russia had been like England, is will be engraved in marble missariat such as awaited English armies, they would have gone through Hungary from one used away from the minds of end to the other. I do not speak of fighting the Hungarians, but merely of the difficulty of getting through the country; for every one knows and thedanger of attack by a hostile population; and all this I trace to the undoubted poverty of the Russian Government. New, we do not come here to interfere with foreign countries, and the Egyptian contingent. ng the consistion of Hungary, Gen. or to make a crusade against foreign finances, trality and the rights of independence, in which ewore to maintain the constitution and independence of Hungary. All his soucessors took the sine oath. The crown of Hangary first became ereditary in the house of Hap-burgh in virtue of the Pragmatic Sanction, passed by the estates of Hungary in 1687. In 1723 this settlement was exended by the Hangarian Diet to the female line of the house of Hapsburgh (second Pragmatic Sanction.) But the independence of Hungary was natutained and guarantied not less by these very acts than by the oaths of all the kings of the hous Hepeburgh L. rraine, even down to our own s. By article 10 of the year 1790, the Emperorking Leopoid II. recognised Hungary as a free and tependent state, in its whole legislative and ad-nistrative system. Hence the article 3 of the year 1848, by which a parliamentary government was settled in Hungary, introduced no change in than a development of all the foregoing laws, It was passed by a unanimous vote of the two houses in the Hungarian diet, and was formally sanctioned by the king, Fertinanc V.
